Outline

Descent

On different paths you can easily reach the valley. For the shortest stretch back to the car park, first walk down the wide path from the transmitter and then turn right immediately towards Arzl.

Arrival

Exit the motorway A12 at Imst or if you are coming from the Fernpass then drive until Imst. From there towards direction Pitztal to the first village in the Pitztal called Arzl. Once there, follow the signs to the parking area of the via ferrata (fire station). The access is reachable within 10 minutes from the parking space.

Public transport

Description

The via ferrata is reachable within 10 minutes from a parking place near the valley entrance of the Pitztal. The easy variant leads towards the right after the access and is the ideal preparation for the more difficult route on the left side.

You climb up the stone wall in three sections. Hence, it is possible to either do a round tour in the wall or walk down comfortably to the valley.

The beginning is promising. Over an edge with a view to the valley, you climb up and later you reach the junction via a traverse.

The second part is very demanding. Within the difficulty level of C and D+, the route utilises the natural formations, levels and plates of the partly outwards expanding rock.

For families, the rope stretches toward the west over a ramp. Both variants rejoin at the exit. Hence, different variations are possible and the easier part can be used as a descent to make a round trip.

Descent

Various trails lead comfortably down to the valley. For the shortest distance back to the parking space, walk from the transmitter a small section on the wide path downwards and then turn right to Arzl.
